

Short Biography:

Professor Greg R. Licameli is the director of Cochlear Implant Program and an attending surgeon of otolaryngology department in Boston's children hospital. He received his bachelors of science degree from Emory University in Atlanta Georgia. After college, he worked on a Master's degree in Genetics for 2 years at Emory University, then went to medical school for four years at the Medical College of Georgia.

He completed a 5-year residency program in otolaryngology at the Boston University/Tufts University Combined Otolaryngology Residency program. He then went to John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Maryland for a one-year fellowship in Pediatric Otolaryngology.

After training, He spent three years as an attending surgeon at the University of Illinois in Chicago, Illinois, then came to Boston Children's Hospital 23 years ago, where he is an Assistant Professor of Otolaryngology and Director of the Cochlear Implant Program. He received his Master's Degree in Health Care Management from the Harvard School of Public Health in 2006 and was the interim chair of the Department of Otolaryngology from 2008 to 2010.